SAINT JOSEPH'S COLLEGE
SCHOOL OF ADULT AND
PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION
BROOKLYN CAMPUS

My emotions are filled with feelings of accomplishments, excitement and pride, and I would like to take this opportunity to thank my father, brother and sister-in-law. My father who always has time to listen to me and supports me in everything that I do. My twin brother, for all the times and moments we shared together, and most of the times we have traveled life's path in the same direction. We always seem to have the same goals in life. And my sister-in-law who is always there for me. But first and foremost, I thank God today and always for giving me this opportunity to have all that I am thankful for.

Life at Saint Joseph's College has been very rewarding both academically and socially. I met and made so many friends along the way. Elba Fernandez, who graduated in the class of '99, wrote an article in that year's edition of Achievements, about our friendship. Now it is my turn to share my thoughts and inner feelings about her. Elba is a true friend. She someone that always keeps in touch. She is a friend for life.

The professors at Saint Joseph's are all exceptional. I wrote an article in the '98 Achievements, in which I described Professor Daniel Beni. He is still and will always be very special to me. He was my first professor at Saint Joseph's College. He is a very passionate, caring and gentle person. My first day at the College was very special to me and I had a chance to share it with the class in Adults In Transition, which Professor Beni taught. In this class, students have an opportunity to share their lives and experiences with each other in a supportive environment.

Professor Minnie Stanley teaches Human Resources Management and is very knowledgeable in HR-this is her area of expertise. Professor Clarence Stanley is well-rounded and possesses great expertise in the area of banking. He is always very pleasant. Professor Rupert Campbell teaches Organizational Behavior and is a very powerful, dynamic and outgoing individual. Professor Michael Connolly teaches Civil and Political Rights. He is very informative because of his extensive background working with politicians. Linda Fonte is an Assistant Dean, and is quite friendly and helpful. Sister Carole Lessard has been quite welcoming and helpful to me. All and all, the professors and the students are great in their own unique way.

As my days at Saint Joseph's College come to an end, I will soon be met with new and exciting opportunities and challenges, which will bring for the opportunity to utilize my degree in Management.

The Nighttime Waves

The nighttime waves are always full of life.

You are never alone, not even at night; the waves are consistently moving in a direction as light as a feather or as fierce as the night's winds.

The smell of the ocean's breeze and the ocean's mist will delight you with such pleasure, you will feel that you are not alone.

There is always movement in the ocean; sometimes the movement of the waves are calmer than other times, depending on the night.

As the moonlight glows down upon the ocean, it will add a romantic touch to the ocean.

The glowing of the moon onto the ocean's waves will almost appear to be lighting up the ocean to show off the beautiful waves of the night.

A FINAL EPISODE

Blackness surrounds my very existence; I am alone with nothing to cover my fears. I look around at the walls that have been my world for the past eleven years. Fear engulfs my mind. How did I end up here? I allowed myself the pleasure of feeling the pain of loneliness if only for the moment. How did I allow myself to be in this place and time? Once I was an innocent, a child of my father. My mother's hopes and dreams. When did I become this anchorite, this silent being without expectations? You ask me mother, what can I anticipate from this life that I have chosen? I ask for the sun to shine on my haggard seasoned flesh, to feel a woman's tender lips upon my face as I awaken from sleep. But most of all I ask for the right to die a free man.

ALWAYS THERE

Such a small quiet child, he raises his tiny arms to me. I encircle his body within mine. I feel his warm breath against my cheek. I reflect on moments that I can no longer feel. I feel what I can no longer see. This child of mine I can no longer hold. Grown into a man, far from my physical state yet forever in my heart.

"My Son"

For those of us who journeyed back
With graduation as our vision
We studied hard and endured the lack
Of pleasures to accomplish our mission

For those of us who always said
We would go back to school some day
The day is now and here we are
A success in every way

St. Joseph's has been wonderful
A great experience for me
The teachers, classmates, time well spent
I'm sure all students would agree

Our families are quite proud of us
You can see it in their faces
They helped us all by being strong
And were always more than gracious

The times we shared will remain with us
Forever throughout the years
Our memories we will always have
And shall cherish, oh so dear

My wish for all my classmates is
Success in every day
May life hold for you what you want from it
For each and everyday

In closing I would like to say
To everyone who helped me
My deepest thanks I'm on my way
A St. Joseph's grad I shall be

The Class of 2002

June 2002

Dear Saint Joseph's College:

Once upon a time, this young girl had a dream. That dream was of growing up, finding love, and becoming a lawyer. Well, as we all know, sometimes our dreams are put aside because of circumstances that are beyond our control. Life has many twists and turns that can send us on different paths. We may lose sight of our ideals and dreams. The little girl grew up and married her true love, settled down to raise a family, and put aside her dreams of pursuing an education. After many years, thirty if you count them, the little girl was finally able to realize her dream. But it was not to be a lawyer. Her call was greater. She would become a Counselor, and she was finally able to attend college.

She researched many colleges before she decided to attend the School of Adult and Professional Education at Saint Joseph's College. She chose the College because of the diversity of its students, the excellence of its programs, and the professionalism of its staff. Let us not forget that this is a college for adult professionals as well as for traditional students enrolled in Arts and Sciences.

The library staff is always available to lend a helping hand. The banks of computers, housed in a high tech setting, let us survey emerging events and trends in the 21st century. The library, stacked high with books, journals and other materials made it possible to research any subject of interest. Recently, the School added a Master's degree program in Management to its many other fine offerings.

It took this woman five years to complete the requirements for college. This June, she will be awarded the Bachelor of Science degree in Community Health. Today, as I write this tribute, I want it to be known that if it were not for all the fine professors and staff at Saint Joseph's College, this childhood dream of a fifty-year old woman would never have been realized. Saint Joseph's "You're the Greatest". Thanks.

Yours truly,

Jo-Anne B. Anastasio

P.S. Encouraged by my attainments at Saint Joseph's, I enrolled in a Master's degree program this spring. I'm not getting older, just wiser. Education is Knowledge, and as we all know, Knowledge is Power.

Dear Graduate,

In this, your last year of course work, classes started as usual, right after Labor Day. Everything was normal, until the morning of Tuesday, the 11th, and then everything changed. To help us deal with the aftermath of that day, we came together on a Saturday in October for an interfaith service of prayer and remembrance. Our struggle for meaning and solace was aided by thoughtful perspective from representatives of the faiths of Judaism, Christianity, Islam, and Hinduism. As part of the ceremony, we took time to remember those lost whom we knew by name. And we concluded by singing the verses of America the Beautiful.

NEW YORK
School of Adult and
Professional Education

Looking back on that service, the famous line of Langston Hughes comes to mind: "I, too, sing America." In the spirit of the poet's words, our gathering was emblematic of what is best about St. Joseph's. We stood united on the foundation of the great diversity of our backgrounds and experiences, and we joined our voices in praise of shared values and ideals.

After coming through an autumn of mourning and a winter of war, we are now in the celebratory season of commencement. It is a time when we gather together on an afternoon in late spring to participate in a ceremony that commemorates the realization of your dream to achieve the Baccalaureate. Through dedication and persistence, you have accomplished a major life goal, and for this, you deserve our highest praise. Congratulations!

I would like to extend a word of appreciation to Daniel Beni, S. Carole Lessard, Susie James and Linda Barna for the work that they have done to make this year's Achievements such a success. May it serve as a reminder of your accomplishment and of the friends who shared the St. Joseph's College experience with you.

Sincerely,

Thomas G. Travis
Vice President and Dean

Daniel Beni, Preceptor in General Studies and Achievements Moderator

Dear Graduates,

Erickson informs us that generativity is a unique stage in adult development. It is marked by a strong impulse to contribute something enduring to humanity; to give freely of ourselves and our talents to others with passion, generosity, and caring — without feeling that the giving is a depletion of the self. Building on this concept, Kotre advances the idea that moments of generativity occur during the entire lifespan of an individual, from youth through older age.

Graduation from college is decidedly one of these special moments. You have acquired a formidable range of knowledge and skills. I ask you to consider these tools, not only for professional betterment, but to improve the communities you so ably serve. In so doing, others will come to understand your unique qualities, and you will be able to “command” their energies and dedication to the good works you undertake.

I also hope that this edition of Achievements will become an enduring remembrance of the friendships developed and experiences you had with all of us at Saint Joseph's College. You have devoted yourself to your studies with great intensity and unity of purpose. You are now a college graduate. I congratulate you on this stellar achievement.

I would like to thank Jo-Anne Anastasio, Deborah Anglin, Toni Delia, Angela Manning, Maxine Powell, Rick John III, and Wendy Rhodes, for contributing writings that have enlivened the pages of this yearbook. I would also like to thank Susie James, S. Carole Lessard and Leslie Barna for providing steadfast and totally reliable administrative support, so essential to the publication of this yearbook, and to Sadie McMillan, for encouraging and signing-up graduates to have their portraits taken.

Congratulations. May your lives overflow with happiness and be filled with bright and bold achievements.

Cordially,

Daniel Beni

FANTASY AND FESTIVITY BLEND IN THE NUTCRACKER

Members of the Aesthetics Activities (Arts club) and their families, celebrated the holiday season by attending the stellar presentation of The Nutcracker performed by the American Ballet Theater at Lincoln Center.

Earlier in the year, the Club, which numbers 50 members and guests, was inspired by a searing production of the heralded drama King Hedley II. We were also delighted to attend sparking performances of the venerable Broadway musicals Aida and The Lion King.

Members and guests of the Arts Club enjoy the Lincoln Center experience after attending The Nutcracker.

If there's ever a time when you're down and no one's around, remember that you have yourself. Believe in what you do and what you aim to do; don't give up — just keep on moving. Imagine the what, when or how it will be. Take the time to uncover the darkness that covers you. Say to yourself, I'm almost there, no matter what distracts you. You are on your own; don't destroy what took you so long to find, for you are what will be, you are soon to be.

Reach ... you're almost there.

Congratulations graduates! As you venture into the world beyond St. Joseph's, armed with your hard earned, newly acquired degree, our best wishes go with you.

Some of you may be moving on to entirely new careers. Others may be looking forward to promotions or other advancement opportunities in your current fields. A select few may even be entering the job market for the first time. Whatever the case, your degree now has your goals more closely within reach. The efforts, energies expended, and sacrifices made in your degree pursuit, makes it well deserved. Those of us who remain here, aspiring to what you have attained, are heartened and inspired by your accomplishments.

As you would agree, no small measure of credit need be accorded St. Joseph's, its faculty, and staff. Their concern, guidance, and support helped make the segment of the journey through life that you have now successfully completed, easier to traverse. We who remain here hope that they continue to be the same valuable and accessible resource to assist us in shortly joining you as St. Joseph's alumni.

Again, congratulations on all your hard work and achievements, and the very best wishes in all your future endeavors!

My first day in speech class.

I was very nervous on my way to school that morning. All I could think about was standing in front of those students and struggling through a speech. In fact, when I got to class, I was pleasantly surprised to encounter the small number of students enrolled. The Professor, Debra Freedman, was down-to-earth. She presented the course requirements and outlined the content areas we would study. She was very clear about her expectations for each of us. Each of us presented an impromptu speech with a partner. Our speeches were videotaped which greatly enhanced our later performances. We also had the opportunity to express how we felt about the experience of giving a speech.

Oh, Saint Joseph's, you surely will be missed.

Although sociology, classical music, statistics, managerial courses, and the like, will forever be instilled in my mind, these will bring forth the memories of the academics experience that I have achieved while attending the School of Adult and Professional Education. It will be something that I will have for lifetime.

Education never goes to waste. Education is of great value and importance not only to ourselves but also in our every day interactions with others, whether co-workers, family or friends. We have now achieved a greater level of education and it is now time to utilize what we have learned and to be proud of our accomplishment.

It is time to start a new career. We have opened doors to new challenges and consequences that we are ready to meet because of our educational background at Saint Joseph's College. We can welcome these challenges with open arms because we know what to expect as we move up the corporate ladder, and we are ready, willing and able to work out any differences, conflicts or problems that we meet along the way.

It is not just a diploma. It is a degree. It is a lifetime of knowledge. It is the feeling of joy. Yes, we did it, and we did it the right way.
